A brief history of JKA

The Japan Karate Association (JKA) is one of the most influential organizations in traditional karate. Founded in 1948, it has played a central role in preserving and spreading Shotokan karate through structured training, professional instructors, and a strong focus on discipline, respect, and technical excellence.

Origins of Karate

Karate originated in Okinawa as a system of self-defense known as Te (“hand”). Through cultural exchange with China, the art was influenced by Chinese martial arts. It is believed that karate began developing around 500 years ago, especially after weapons were banned in Okinawa, which led to the refinement of unarmed combat techniques.

The Founding of the JKA

In 1948, Funakoshi’s followers founded the Japan Karate Association (JKA) to preserve and promote traditional karate. The organization opened its headquarters dojo in Tokyo in 1955 and created a professional instructor training program in 1956. In 1957, the Japanese Ministry of Education officially recognized the JKA.

International Growth

Karate grew rapidly in popularity during the following decades. The first All Japan Karate Championship was held in 1957, and highly trained JKA instructors were sent overseas to establish dojo in Europe, the Americas, and the Middle East. This helped karate develop into a global martial art.

JKA Today

Today, the JKA continues to promote traditional Shotokan karate, emphasizing discipline, respect, and the development of both physical and mental strength. Recognized by the Japanese government as a public interest organization, the JKA remains committed to preserving karate’s highest traditions and sharing them with the world.
